A straight line projection is calculated by comparing last year's enrolment to this year's enrolment. For example, in 2005 there were 2,228 students enrolled in ECS. A straight line projection of these students into Grade 1 would forecast that in 2006, that there would be 2,228 students enrolled in Grade 1. The actual number of students enrolled in Grade 1 in 2006 is 2,312. The difference between the straight line projection and the actual is 84 students. There are 84 more students than expected in Grade 1 in 2006.
