The biggest things to remember when looking at scholarship and award requirements is just to apply to them all!

Every institution in Canada has thousands of dollars every year in scholarships and awards that go unclaimed because no one applies.

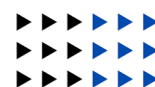

Don't just look at the dollar amount, as of course, the larger the amount, the more people will apply, meaning competition can be stiff. The smaller award totals are often overlooked.

Do not worry if you think you only have the minimum requirements. Many students think the same thing — there has to be someone with higher grades, or more volunteering or leadership experience or a larger financial need — so they do not apply. Forget that.

Apply to them all!

WHAT IS AN AWARD, BURSARY & SCHOLARSHIP?

Award

These are one-time funds, and selection criteria varies: they could be based on academics, leadership, athletics, or — depending on the sponsor of the award — essays or financial need. Awards are not renewable, but it is possible to win several awards in a semester. Awards are not always financial! They can also come in the form of books, conference or membership registrations, or even school supplies for the coming semester.

Bursary

Bursaries are based on financial need. In addition to the paperwork required for a scholarship and/or award, you will also need:

Financial Information Form: on this form you'll provide information regarding your parents jobs, your job, estimated annual school expenses (including books) room/board and transportation.

Personal Statement: here you'll need to explain any specific circumstances that the bursary selection committee should be made aware of.

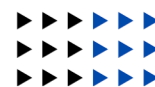

Testimonial Statement: this form should be from a parent or guardian regarding your financial need in support of your bursary application.

Scholarship

Scholarships are the best known financial assistance for students. They are most often merit based (or academic based) but they can also be based on sports, leadership/volunteering, etc. Many are renewable based on outlined requirements by the institution, but these tend to be ones that are offered starting from your second semester on. "Renewable" means you can continue to receive funds so long as you're eligible.

Students applying for scholarships must present a transcript of their high school grades, as well as a short-written description of their athletic and/or leadership qualities when these are specified in the scholarship applied for.

BAND FUNDING FOR POST-SECONDARY

What is band funding?

If you're a Band member of a First Nation, you may be eligible for federal funding, administered through your Band office, to help you pay for your education.

1. How do I apply for post-secondary funding from my band?

There is a process for applying for post-secondary funding from your band. The first step is to make initial contact with your band regarding postsecondary funding (phone call or in person visit).

Once contact is made the following information will need to be known:

- When is the application deadline?
- Is there any necessary paperwork that needs to be completed? (i.e. paper application, letter of intent, career investigation, FOIPP release of information, etc.)

2. What if I haven't ever contacted my band for anything?

This is not a problem as your name will appear on your band list and after contacting your band, they will be aware of your intentions to attend post-secondary. www.aadnc-aandc.gc.ca

3. What will I need to provide to be funded?

- Copy of your Indian Status card.
- Letter of conditional acceptance to post-secondary.
- Cost of tuition, books, and other applicable fees.
- Schedule for upcoming semester

4. How will I know if my funding has been approved?

- Your band will most likely contact you directly via telephone, letter mail, or email to inform you of their decision.
- As with anything else a follow up phone call is always a good choice.

Most bands prioritize applicants who are applying straight from high school.

5. What is typically covered with band funding?

- Living allowance for fulltime students.
- Tuition, books, any other costs related to your education.
- Part-time students: tuition and book fees only.
- Some bands will cover tutoring fees.

6. What is typically NOT covered with band funding?

- Personal items and services not crucial to course requirements.
- Personal liabilities, bill repayments, loans, or other financial debts. Students are encouraged to assess their personal financial status before committing to full time education.
- Fees for Health and Dental plans offered by colleges and universities.
- Computers, computer equipment, software and supplies.

7. What if I am Bill C-31?

- If you are Bill C-31 Status and your band is located in Alberta, you will most likely need to access funding via Freehorse Family Wellness Society. Details regarding Freehorse Family Wellness Society's funding can be found on page 10 of this handbook or by contacting the Freehorse Wellness Society for further information.

8. What is Bill C-31?

- C-31 changed the registration system so that entitlement was no longer based on sexually discriminatory rules. The amendments, effective April 17, 1985:
 - a.) treat men and women equally;
 - b.) treat children equally whether they are born in or out of wedlock and whether they are natural or adopted;
 - c.) prevent anyone from gaining or losing status through marriage;
 - d.) restore Indian status for those who lost it through discrimination or enfranchisement;
 - e.) allow first-time registration of children (and in some cases descendants of subsequent generations) of those whose status is restored; and f.) allows for the registration of children born out of wedlock if either parent was a registered Indian, regardless of their date of birth. The federal government continues to maintain the Indian Register. Those who were recorded in the Indian Register when the amendments came into force continue to be recorded there. Those whose status was to be restored or who are eligible to be registered for the first time must apply to the Registrar to be recorded.

- Two categories of persons were excluded from registration under the C31 provisions:

a.) women who gained status only through marriage to a status Indian, and later lost it (e.g. through re-marriage to a non-Indian); and b.) children whose mother gained Indian status through marriage and whose father is non-Indian.

9. What if I am not Status Indian?

As a Non-Status Indian, you are eligible for various scholarships or bursaries.

10. What if I am Métis?

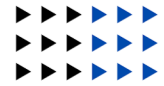

If you are a member of a Métis settlement you may be eligible to be sponsored through your settlement. Please contact your settlement for further information.

As a Métis student you are also eligible for various scholarships or bursaries. Please see page 10 of this handbook.

Band funding can limit some scholarships, awards and bursaries that you can apply for. Ensure you read all application requirements

SCHOLARSHIPS & BURSARIES

APPLICATION TIPS

1. If you have questions, ask them! It's better to ask and be 100% clear than be unsure and make a mistake.
2. Check deadline dates and give yourself enough time to complete applications and gather supporting documents.
3. Always print two copies of the application and information. One copy for rough draft/personal records and one copy to send in.
4. READ the entire application before filling in blanks and identify what you'll need before applying (ex: forms, essay, letters, etc.).
5. Request transcripts early. If you have to send transcripts at the end of the semester/year, indicate on your application that you will forward them later.
6. Select a minimum of two people who can write references on your behalf (grad coach, teacher, pastor, etc.).
7. NEVER send in a hand-written letter/essay on loose-leaf. Type your essay and sign the bottom.
8. Review and EDIT your application. Make sure it has no errors or spelling mistakes.
9. Place your CLEAN, unfolded application and supporting documents in a brown envelope.
10. This booklet is only a selection of scholarships and bursaries; there are thousands of financial aids that are available. Make sure you search and apply for as many scholarships and bursaries as you can!
11. Apply for scholarships and bursaries even if you don't meet all the criteria described in the posting. Remember they are describing the ideal candidate and if you write a compelling essay your application may be considered, especially if they receive a limited number of applicants.

STUDENT CHECK LIST

Proof of Enrollment

All scholarships will require proof of enrollment. This could be your acceptance letter or specified letter stating your enrollment. Most Institutions will have a proof of enrollment option on their student accounts portal. Ask your Bridging Futures coordinator how to access it!

Transcripts

Merit-based scholarships almost always require your transcripts (high school and/or college, depending on your current education) as they are looking for students who have over a certain GPA.

For scholarships that are available for renewal, they may also require your transcripts to see that you're maintaining the required GPA. If you fail to meet this scholarship requirement, you could lose out on the award.

Financial Details

For need-based awards, financial details are a common scholarship requirement. Applications may ask for financial information, income and budget. This will help demonstrate your financial need.

Essay

It's not uncommon for a scholarship to require you to send an essay along with your application. The essay's criteria vary greatly from each award, so read the rules before you start writing! In some cases, the essay may present you with a particular prompt, such as "What are your plans if you win this award?" or "Why do you deserve to win?". Check out the "Essay Writing Tips" section of this booklet.

Cover Letter

A cover letter can help strengthen and contextualize your application for a scholarship. Scholarship cover letters aim to show the review committee why you're the best candidate for a scholarship and how the award might benefit your studies.

Resume

A resume is an important document that reflects your skills, experience and assets. It is a document that summarizes your work and volunteer history, education, skills and accomplishments as they relate to the scholarship or award that you are applying for.

7.

Letter of Recommendation

A letter of recommendation is a document that outlines an individual's qualities, character, skills and credibility. It supports your application for a scholarship, showing that you're capable of being a competent student.

The author of a recommendation letter is a professional who knows you and can speak candidly about your academic strengths and goals.

Proof of Identification

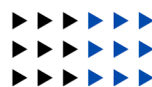

Most scholarships require you to send proof of identification. Have a copy of your ID (front and back) saved as a PDF file.

Also, some scholarships specifically for Indigenous students require proof of ancestry. Proof of ancestry can include Indian Status cards, Metis Card etc. have a PDF (front and back) saved as well!

Have printed or digital copies of ALL of the documents listed, stored in one file folder for easy access and smoother application process! See next page for more information about "Scholarship Toolbox".

HELPFUL INFORMATION

Scholarship Spreadsheet

1. Creating a spreadsheet with columns for deadlines, application opening dates, scholarship names, website link, criteria, required documents and status of application, will help keep you organized for the coming school year! See example below.

Deadline	Opens	Name	Website	Criteria	Required Docs	Application Status
May 31, 2024	February 1, 2024	Example Scholarship	ExampleScholarship.com	• Full-Time Studies • Indigenous Education Degree Program	• Essay • Proof of Enrollment • Transcripts • Proof of Indigenous Ancestry	Applied on May 15, 2023

Have a “skeleton essay” ready to go!

2. Having an already prepared essay with an Intro can save you time in preparing your application. Ensure you read ALL essay writing criteria! Note that some scholarship applications have their own specific writing prompts!

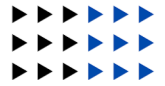

Build a Scholarship Toolbox

3. What, you might ask, is a scholarship toolbox? Basically, it's just all of the resources and knowledge you'll need to slay the scholarship application process!
The items you'll need for your toolbox are listed in the student checklist.

Other items that might be helpful to include:

- Personal information - Name, address, email address, SIN number etc.
- School Information - Name, address, proof of enrollment, fee assessment, course schedule etc.
- Past Scholarship Essays - using your past essays as a tool to pull examples from
- Photo of you (Optional) - some scholarships will ask for a non-blurry photo of you to post on their websites or use it for promotional purposes.
